

Loudoun Literacy Council Seeks Corporate Sponsors for it's Annual Corporate Spelling Bee!

Dear Beverly,

The Loudoun Literacy Council is recruiting sponsors for its third annual Corporate Spelling Bee on April 27. Lightfoot Restaurant in downtown historic Leesburg will host the spelling bee.

Celebrity judges will include Dr. Edgar Hatrick, superintendent of Loudoun County Public Schools, Virginia State Senator Mark Herring and Loudoun County Teacher of the Year Patricia Herr. Tom Notar, vice president of sales operations for BroadSoft, will emcee the event.

Each sponsoring company will send a team of three spellers where they will compete against other business leaders in a round-robin spelling contest. The company teams will receive a list of words to study before the event. The winning team receives the Champion Speller's Cup to display for one year and an announcement in all local papers. Currently, Verizon Communications, Rolls Royce, K2M, Ventura and Loudoun Times Mirror have signed up as sponsors. Not able to form a team, but still want to be a sponsor...not a problem. We have other supporting sponsorship opportunities available for you!

Funds generated by the spelling bee will support its mission-to improve literacy throughout Loudoun County. The Loudoun Literacy Council helps low-literate adults and children from disadvantaged families learn to speak, read, write and understand English. They train volunteers from the community to become GED and adult basic literacy tutors or English as a Second Language (ESL) teachers and match them with any adult who wants to improve their skills. Their trained staff provides literacy programs to children and their families who are in the Head Start programs as well as those who reside in homeless shelters.
